Providing the Warfighter with the Decisive Edge!

U.S. Army Sustainment Command Fact Sheet

The U.S. Army Sustainment Command organizes, trains, and sustains a quality deployable force and integrates materiel and services to the Soldier

Major ASC responsibilities are:

- Materiel Enterprise Field Integrator – ASC operates a network of Army field support brigades and battalions, logistics support elements, and brigade logistics support teams that synchronize and integrate materiel readiness for the warfighter and our Army, including acquisition, logistics and technology. Provides support to contingency operations including Operation Enduring Freedom surge and sustainment, Operation Iraqi Freedom drawdown and sustainment, and Operation United Response Haiti relief operations. Support to Army Force Generation includes field level reset, left behind equipment, and pre-deployment training equipment.
- Materiel Management – ASC provides materiel readiness visibility and management, including property accountability and source of repair workload. The Materiel Management Center is the “Army’s DISCOM” – working contracting requirements, supply management, ARFORGEN equipping strategy, and Directorate of Logistics realignment.
- LOGCAP – The Logistics Civil Augmentation Program is an Army program which uses contractors in wartime and to support global contingencies for Department of Defense missions. They deliver a wide range of support services such as dining facilities, laundry, and lodging to deployed forces worldwide, freeing soldiers for combat missions
- Army Prepositioned Stocks – ASC maintains, accounts for and cares for stocks in storage worldwide. These stocks include combat equipment and supplies, and humanitarian mission stocks, at land- and sea-based positions strategically located around the globe. Sites include the continental U.S., Italy, Korea, Japan, Kuwait, Qatar and Afghanistan.
- Directorates of Logistics - Transferring all functions and responsibilities of 77 Directorates of Logistics around the globe from IMCOM to AMC with OPCON to ASC’s Army Field Support Brigades aligns logistics support with core competencies with the objective of providing good or better service at the best value, by increasing quality, efficiency, and standardizing performance within Materiel Enterprise. This transfer essentially places the Army’s field level maintenance and supply capabilities under the command and control of one single command structure, the ASC.
